65 Swimming pool Sunday: In an English village a girl injures herself in a neighbor's swimming pool and a lawyer convinces the mother to sue. Unaw is using her to further his career, she does so, starting a string of unfore events. By the author of A Desirable Residence. Hillary Clinton said that Fin Way would stay with her through the general election: "When you're facing challenges in your life, you can think about Diana Nyad getting attacked by lethal sting of box jellyfishes. And nearly anything else seems doable in comparison." When Diana Nyad arrived on the shore of Key West after fifty hours of grueling swimming across an epic ocean, she not only set a world record—becoming the first person to swim the shark-infested waters betw and Florida with no cage for protection—she also succeeded in fulfilling a c she first chafed at age twenty-eight and at long last achieved when she was forty-four. Now, in a riveting memoir, Diana shares a spirited account of what it takes to face one's fears, engage one's passions, and never ever give up. For no matter what life may throw at you, or how many times you may have experienced setbacks, it is always possible—as long as you commit to living life to the nth degree, and never regret—to “find a way.”

65 A Sunday at the Pool in Kigali is a moving, passionate love story set amid the turmoil and terror of Rwanda's genocide. All manner of Kigali residents pass their time by the pool of the Mille-Collines hotel: aid workers, Rwandan bourgeoisie, expatriates, UN peacekeepers, prostitutes. Keeping a watchful eye is Bernard Valcourt, a jaded foreign journalist, but his closest attention is devoted to Gentille, a hotel waitress with the slender, elegant features of a Tutsi. As they slip into an intense, improbable affair, the delicately balanced world around them—already devastated by AIDS—erupts in a Hutu-led genocide against the Tutsi people. Valcourt's efforts to spirit Gentille to safety end in their separation. It will be months before he learns of his lover's shocking fate.

65 2006 Iowa Poetry Prize winner In Sunday Houses the Sunday House, Elizabeth Hughey embraces the possibility that we can learn as much from objects as we can from other people, from the inanimate as much as the animate. Each poem descends upon a place and a time, takes notes, and then leaves quietly without slamming any doors. Sunday Houses reveals what the world is like when your attention is focused elsewhere, when your head is turned the other way. In ineffably beautiful verse Hughey captures moments in time and place with confidence but without judgment. Although it may seem that the scope of these poems is rather narrow—a good party, a couple of eggs, a housekeeper's daydream—they reveal both intelligence and a spirit of whimsy. Gertrude Stein wrote that she wanted to be “drunk with nouns,” and in a sense that is what Hughey has accomplished.

Swimming Pool Sunday by Sophie Kinsella, writing as Madeleine Wickham On a shimmeringly hot Sunday in May, the Delaneys open their pool to the whole town for charity. Louise is there with her daughters, and while the children splash and shriek in the cool blue waters, she basks in the sunshine, attempting to ignore her estranged husband and dreaming of the new man in her life, a charismatic

The day seems perfect. Then a sudden and shocking accident changes everyone's lives forever. Recriminations start to fly. Whose fault was it? Louise's new lawyer insists that she sues the Delaneys. Her ex-husband isn't so sure. Opinion in the village is split. Old friendships start to crumble. New ones are formed. Will the repercussions from the accident ever end? "A fine entertainment."- The Times

A collection of quotes, reminiscences and ponderings by numerous people raise a broad assortment of Plymouth Brethren (So-called) groups, all the way from the chapels on the one hand, to the cultish right-wing end of the movement, such as groups like the Raven-Taylor-Hales Exclusives. Intended to spark thoughts and feelings.
